

Online Session on International e-Workshop on Good Clinical Practices & Health Economics

(07th – 11th December, 2020)

An International e-Workshop on Good Clinical Practices & Health Economics with the Theme “Updates on new clinical trial regulation trends in HEOR and global challenges” was organized from 07.12.2020 to 11.12.2020 and it was attended by 200 participants. Clinical practice guidelines and economic analyses of new and established medical interventions was discussed with various experts from industry and academia. It was highlighted that the overriding impetus for both is the rapidly rising cost of medical care. They emphasized on the goals of guidelines and economic analyses which includes: encourage health care providers to adopt a “best practice” approach to care for a given patient population with a given condition. Adopting such an approach will reduce practice variation, decrease the amount of ineffective and therefore wasteful care, and improve outcomes by encouraging the use of proven therapies. The participants actively participated in the workshop by putting forward their queries which were resolved by the experts.
