OBJECTIVE OF THE INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE:

Pharmacovigilance, defined by the World Health Organisation as 'the science and activities relating to the detection, assessment, understanding and prevention of adverse effects or any other drug related problems', plays a key role in defining the safety of modern healthcare practice. Pharmaceutical companies and regulators have access to a variety of post-marketing surveillance tools that allow for systematic monitoring of the benefits and risks of medicinal products throughout the life-cycle. Pharmacovigilance activities include risk management planning and the detection, assessment, evaluation and management of drug-related adverse effects. In India, lack of effective pharmacovigilance systems as well as under-reporting of suspected Adverse Drug Events are a major issues potentially undermining patient safety. Identifying and addressing barriers to effective pharmacovigilance in clinical practice is imperative to promote patient safety. This workshop will aim to consider evidence-based strategies to promoting pharmacovigilance in the India. The Clinical research provides the building block upon which other types of biomedical research. Clinical Research dealing with the pre-clinical research, conduct of clinical trials; it will educate health care researchers about design, operation, organizing, research computing, regulatory aspects and reporting of clinical trials. It promotes better understanding by the general public about the importance of clinical trials in prevention, diagnosis and treatment of disease. Pharmacy practice research looks at the impact of the practice of pharmacy on health care systems, medicines use and patient care. Its scope has expanded over the past 50 years to encompass aspects such as the clinical, behavioural, economic and humanistic implications of the pharmacy practice as well as change management and implementation.
