(57) Abstract :

A system 100 for stockpile operation comprises a desktop configured with one or more processors to create a security code for an admin to grant access, generate a plurality of inventories and catalogue a plurality of data, each with a discrete name and access date and a plurality of reports. Further, the processor receives a plurality of data for each of the discrete inventory to compile each date in a plurality of heads, compute data for each change due to inward and outward transactions, display data on the display device as requested by an admin, and protects the system 100 to stop execution, display information, and entry for all except with the guanine security code.
